Alfred Kubin The Other Side

The Other Side is a gloomily satirical novel showing some fine rudiments of absurdism and it is a kind of a mystical dystopia. E.T.A. Hoffmann and Gustav Meyrink are obvious influences on Alfred Kubin's juicy style and the book is written in the very picturesque and highly imaginative manner. We are all wanderers, all of us without exception. It has been so as long as

The Other Side by Alfred Kubin - Goodreads

Kubin doesn't gradually lead from reality to dream-world; rather, he teeters artfully between the two for most of the novel, and this is part of what makes The Other Side effective. If a nightmarish -- even sometimes absurd -- vision, so too there's enough plausible and real to the narrator's experiences that the horror is all the more powerful.

The Other Side - Alfred Kubin

The Other Side is a cult book among fans of weird fiction. It is the only novel Kubin ever wrote and, allegedly, this was done almost as a therapy, after suffering from a serious nervous break-down. Kubin is in fact better known as an illustrator and a prominent exponent of Symbolism and Expressionism.

Biography. Kubin was born in Bohemia in the town of Leitmeritz, Austro-Hungarian Empire (now Litoměřice). From 1892 to 1896, he was apprenticed to the landscape photographer Alois Beer, although he learned little. In 1896, he attempted suicide on his mother's grave, and his short stint in the Austrian army the following year ended with a nervous breakdown.

The Other Side may be as close as we can get. Kubin, an Austrian writer influenced by E.T.A. Hoffman and Edgar Allan Poe, published his novel in 1908 and an excerpt translated by Mike Mitchell is text #1 included in The Weird. The Other Side bridges the gap between old traditions in supernatural writing and new, more modern twentieth-century forms.
