6. Engineering in the Mind's Eye. Author: Eugene Ferguson
Highlighting that good engineering is not only about computation and equations but also nonverbal and intuitive thinking, Eugene Ferguson's book argues that engineering education that ignores these elements will produce engineers that are not fit to tackle real world problems given their differences from academic mathematical problems.

"Anyone who has ever belonged to a book group must read this book. Azar Nafisi takes us into the vivid lives of eight women who must meet in secret to explore the forbidden fiction of the West. It is at once a celebration of the power of the novel and a cry of outrage at the reality in which these women are trapped.

For me, a measure of a good book is one that I think about when I am not reading it. It is a book that beckons me to sit down on the couch whenever I have a few minutes of free time. By the time I got two thirds of the way through this book I realized that I was choosing to read lots of other things instead of the book.
